Time to rejoice, because Arizona's gorgeous spring season is finally here. With the new weather temps gracing the Valley, it's time to pull out some of your beloved spring styles before the blistering summer temps arrive.

And with the help of our friend Tom Simon, who serves as the Sportswear Director at "The Clothier" – a trendy hotspot located at the Biltmore Fashion Park in Phoenix – we've compiled some of the hottest trends and styles to look out for and even experiment with yourself this season.

Loving Linen

Linen is back. Then again, we'd argue if it was ever really out of style. Regardless, this clothing piece is coming back in a big way this season, particularly within the realm of men's fashion styles. Some of the hottest brands are producing new pieces made solely from linen and in a variety of styles, ranging from patterns to solids.

Perhaps the best part about this linen trend is that while it may be popular this season, the versatile material can also work great during the summer months, as well. While this style is fresh and sleek on its own, it can also be paired underneath an unlined sport coat and trousers. This classically-Italian trend is the perfect piece to help welcome the warmer temperatures and embrace your unique fashion sense.

Athleisure at Last

As any Arizonian will know, when the warmer temperatures start picking up, the last thing you want to worry about is how fashionable you look. Your biggest concerns are comfort and staying cool. Fortunately with the Athleisure trend finding a place within this season's style catalogue, you don't have to sacrifice staying cool with looking cool.

Even at The Clothier, Athleisure is being branded into all sorts of style types, whether it be elevated versions of jogging pants in suits or sleek sportswear looks. The best part about the Athleisure trend: continued softness. The number one seller of the season is the JBrand French Terry five pocket "jean." These pants are perfect for traveling and lounging!
