As I walked into the Bentley Projects in Downtown Phoenix this past Saturday, I was instantly overcome by creativity and bright, welcoming faces. I had arrived at AZ Share That You Care held by Pineapple Triangle and was more than ready to check out all the amazing products that every vendor had to offer.

Pineapple Triangle was started in spring of 2014 by Magdelyn McGrath and fueled by her passion for local artists and giving back to the community. By creating Pineapple Triangle, McGrath and her team of other talented women, are able to unite local artists to sell their hand-made and sometimes even one-of-a-kind pieces to everyone that can attend. A portion of the proceeds also goes back to a charity of the artist's choice and it makes this event even that more special.

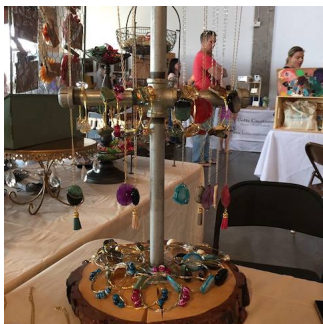

After shopping at AZ Share That You Care, I consider myself spoiled. Not only do I love supporting the amazing talent in Phoenix, but I have found some unique and special pieces that I will always treasure. From delicious smelling organic soaps to delicately handcrafted jewelry, this market will keep you engaged for hours. It is easy to see how passionate the vendors are and it is truly inspiring. I have talked to many of them and they are nothing but kind and humble to be there. It's great meeting others in your area that posses such talent and it's easy to make many friends and connections there too.

This local event is something that you do not want to miss. Their fall market has ended, but there is another one coming up in spring/summer. Each time, there are new up-and-coming artists to check out and fun surprises for all. Phoenix is filled with so much unique talent and we are so fortunate that there is an event that celebrates this.
